FXVM Launches Forex VPS Hosting Service

Los Angeles, California - Trading infrastructure and virtual hosting provider FXVM (www.fxvm.net), an imprint of Gaiacom, L.C., today announced the immediate availability of its forex VPS hosting platform. More than six months of beta testing have contributed to preparing the platform for wide release.

FXVM's forex VPS hosting platform leverages infrastructure colocated in major financial data facilities, paired with virtualized hosting technology, to bring high performance application hosting solutions to individuals and small businesses at reasonable costs. The service is catered to traders of forex and other financial instruments, who require remote systems to host trading applications, including MetaTrader 4. Such applications typically require advanced trade execution speeds and network availability.

FXVM has chosen to work with Equinix (www.equinix.com) and Level3 (www.level3.com) as its primary technology provider partners. Equinix will provide colocation space for FXVM's server hardware in its global International Business Exchange (IBX®) data centers, while Level3 will provide a majority of Internet connectivity for FXVM and its hosted clients, in addition to Equinix's own Equinix Exchange peering points.

In the New York area, FXVM will be locating its hardware at Equinix's NY2 International Business Exchange (IBX®) data center in Secaucus, NJ. In London, Level3's Braham Street facility will host FXVM infrastructure adjacent to London's financial center. Both datacenters feature unrivaled connectivity options for financial applications, as well as state-of-the-art security innovations, making them ideal choices for FXVM's service.

With presence in both New York and London, FXVM hopes to serve a diverse group of traders and financial businesses spanning both continents. FXVM will offer a variety of virtualized forex hosting services, starting at $19.95/mo for a Lite hosting package.
